Unit 1&2 Assignment: Assignments Page

After reading the first two units, you should create a web paged named assignments.html and upload it to your bengal space. The purpose of this web page is to have a central location for submission and review of assignments. In this assignment you only create the basic template or structure for the web page, but the contents will change as the semester progresses.

If you are PC users, please refer to the guide of how to use NotePad to create your first web page; and if you are Mac users, please refer to the guide of how to create your first web page by using TextWrangler.

I. Content of the Assignment

This assignments.html page should have at least the following. Click here to see a basic example.

- the title in the title bar (different from a heading) should be "[Your name goes here]'s Assignment Page"
- a paragraph about yourself or an interesting/funny quote (at least two or three sentences)
- text for links to the units and assignments due during the semester (see the example)
- anything else you want -- please make your page unique

II. How to Submit Your Assignments Page

After finishing your assignments page, you will need to

- upload your assignments.html page to your bengal space, and
- type your URL of your assignments.html page in the Assignment Text in the Assignments tool.

III. Evaluation

Your assignments.html page will be graded based on the following criteria,

- Using the proper html structural tags,
- Having the required content in your page,
- Providing the correct URL to your assignments.html page, and
- Uploading the assignments.html file correctly to your bengal space
